THE VICENNIAL REUNION

The Vicennial was undoubtedly the most successful reunion that the Class has held. The thanks of the Class are due to the Committee in Charge:

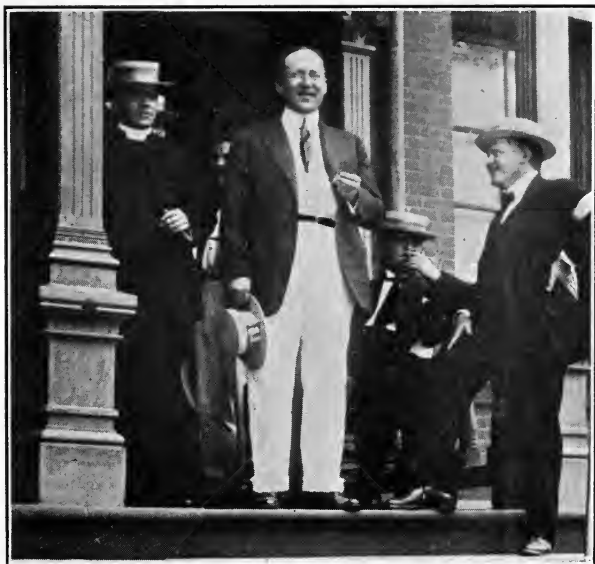

Morgan, Chairman.

Barnes, Secretary.

Fay.

Hackett.

The Class headquarters were located in the Altemont, 124-126 Wall Street, where dormitory accommodations were provided for all who came. A commodious tent set up on the lawn in the rear of the building, and lighted by electricity, provided a comfortable gathering place. Each man, as he registered, was presented with a copy of the preliminary edition of the biographical pages of this book.

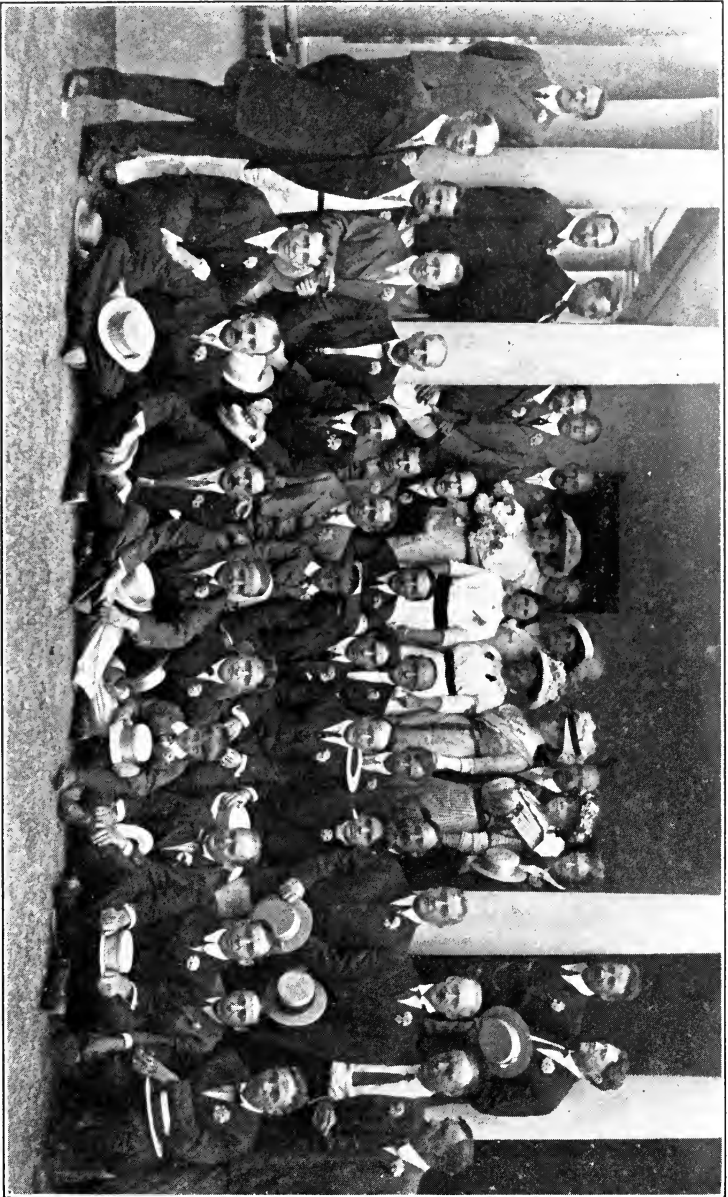

BIRDSALL, DONNELLY, GOODENOUGH

The first arrivals were Morse and Roby, who opened the Headquarters at 10 A. M. on Saturday, June 14, 1913. They were closely followed by Swayne, Eccles and Hastings in the order given. These five lunched together at the Graduates' Club, and immediately afterwards were joined by Ferguson, E. H. Wells, Jepson and Wheeler, making a party of nine who attended the Yale-Cornell baseball game at Yale Field in the afternoon. The victory of the Yale nine and their aggressive style of play forecast the coming victory over Harvard on Class Day.

Saturday afternoon arrivals were Barnes, Spalding, Shaw, Judson, Boardman, Wheelock, Williams, Ficken, Spencer, Birdsall and Morgan. At six o'clock nineteen men went by trolley to Momauguin for a shore supper, at which they were joined later in the evening by H. C. Allen, J. W. Allen, Newton and Wright. There were no speeches and no other formalities, the evening being spent in talk and in singing old songs from the Yale '93 Song Book, printed for use at the Vicennial. "Tub" Allen enlivened the occasion by rendering several verses of his famous twisted song.

Upon the return to Headquarters it was found that late arrivals had brought the number present up to thirty-two.

Commencing with breakfast on Sunday, June 15th, meals were provided at the University Dining Hall, where special tables were reserved for us by E. C. Johnson. A large number attended the Chapel on Sunday morning to hear the Baccalaureate Sermon, and at the conclusion of the Chapel services the entire party, now numbering thirty-nine, journeyed to Hamden Hall, the beautiful home of Doctor Cushing's school, on the shore of Lake Whitney, where, through the courtesy of Doctor and Mrs. Cushing, the Class were given an elegant luncheon by Jepson and his wife. The enjoyment of this most delightful entertainment was greatly enhanced by the presence of Doctor and Mrs. Cushing, Mrs. Jepson, Mrs. Newton, Mrs. Hackett, Mrs. H. A. Bumstead, Miss Eleanor Bumstead, Mrs. Walter E. Coe and Newton's twins, Joseph and Nathan.

AT JEPSON'S LUNCHEON

JUDSON, SHAW, SPENCER, CLARKE, FERSTON, BROWNSON, J. ALLEN, EGGERS, MERRITT, HASTINGS
 VAILE, PROCKEN, HANFSTADT, MORSE, HAY, SPALDING, GIBBS, H. ALLEN, WHEELER, NEWELL, BOARDMAN, HACKETT, SWAYNE, MR. CUSHING

 FARNER, E. WELLS, WAINOCK, ROBY, NEWTON, WILLIAMS, WRIGHT, SEDGWICK, COOKE

NEWTON AND HIS TWINS

MR. CUSHING, MRS. CUSHING, MRS. JEPSON, JEPSON

The luncheon was followed by a brief song recital in the school auditorium by Swayne, accompanied on the piano by Jepson. The programme was as follows:

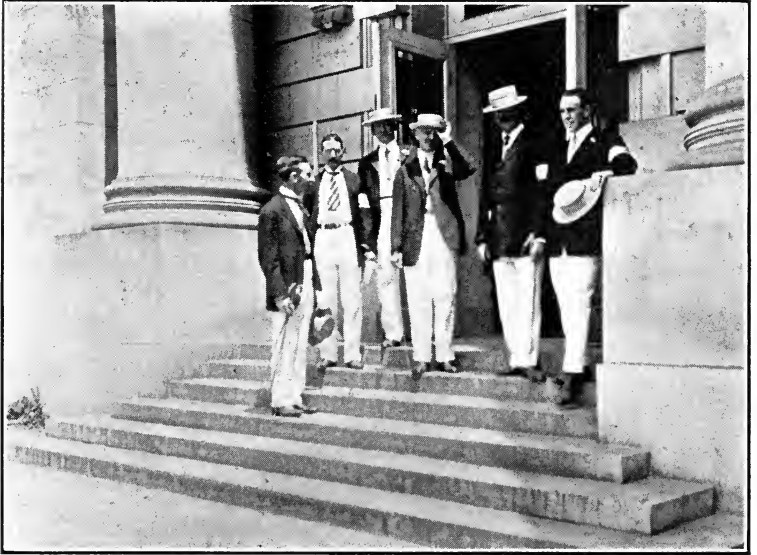

Bois Epais	Lully
Der Doppelgänger	Schubert
Nature's Adoration	Beethoven
Annie Laurie	Scott
Invictus	Huhn
Die beiden Grenadiere.....	Schumann

As a supplement to this recital, by special request Swayne told of "The Discovery of America" and Birdsall gave his imitation of President Hadley.

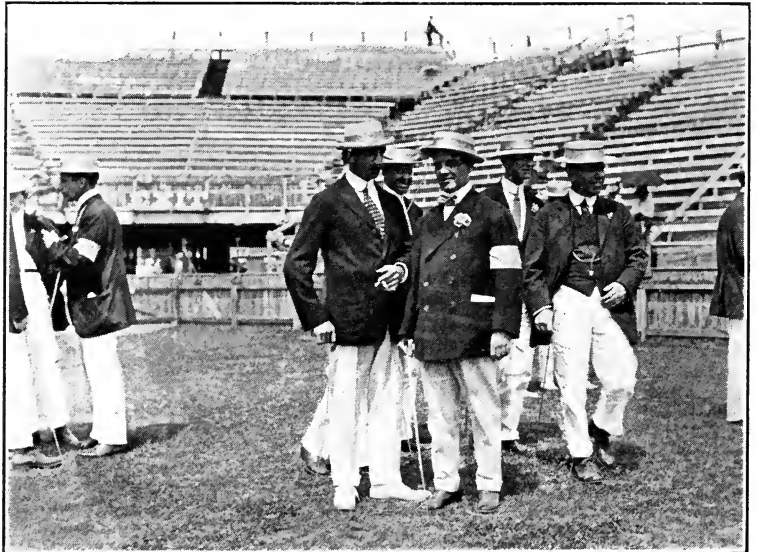

At five o'clock Jepson gave his annual Commencement Organ Recital on the Newberry Memorial Organ in Woolsey Hall, before a large and appreciative audience. The programme was as follows:

- Widor—Eighth Organ Symphony, Op. 42; I Allegro Risoluto.
- Jepson—Recitativo; Giocoso; from the Sonata in G Minor.
- Bonnet—Elfes.
- Faulkes—Fantasia in D Major.
- Bach—Fugue in G Minor.
- Pierné—Sérénade.
- Kroeger—Marche Pittoresque.
- Acadelt—Ave Maria.
- Widor—Eighth Organ Symphony, Op. 42; VI. Finale.

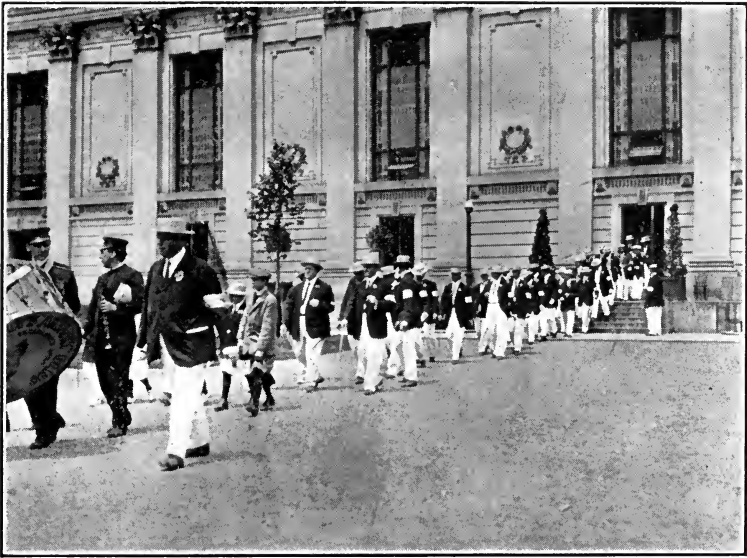

After this recital forty-three of the Class, accompanied by the Class Boy, went by trolley to the Shoreham for dinner, where they were joined a little later by Burchard, Lambert, Rathbone, Scott and Sutphen. There were no formalities and the evening was spent in singing old songs from the Yale '93 Song Book, or from memory. When the Committee paid the bill for the dinner they were interested to note that exactly ninety-three bottles of beer had been consumed.

LEAVING THE LUNCHEON ON TUESDAY

SMITH, WILLIAMS, HARVEY, TAYLOR

On Monday morning, June 16th, was held the annual meeting of the Yale Alumni Advisory Board, at which Gibbs represented the Yale Alumni Association of Maryland; Rathbone, the Alumni Association of Northern California, and Swayne, the Alumni Association of Philadelphia. Swayne was elected a member of the Executive Committee of the Board for a three-year term.

After luncheon, at the University Dining Hall, the men spent the afternoon at tennis or golf, or in loafing about headquarters. Late in the afternoon seventy-seven men gathered at the New Haven Country Club for dinner. Shortly before dinner Harmstad pulled off the first of his two remarkably successful sporting events, a fat men's race, seventy-five yards straight away on the lawn in front of the Clubhouse.

"Skee" proclaimed Weston Allen as his favorite and offered to back him against any man weighing over 190 pounds. The entries were Dorsey, Goodenough and Weston Allen. "Skee" acted as promoter, referee and starter, with Maffitt as judge. Dorsey, running in his shoes, was left at the post; Allen, in stocking feet, fell at the half-way post, and Goodenough, bare-footed, won in a walk.

Seventy-seven men sat down to dinner and the number was increased to eighty-one somewhat later by the arrival of Bosworth, W. E. Dwight, Hutchins and Tyler.

Swayne, acting as Toastmaster, announced that the Vicennial Committee had decided to devote this dinner to serious speeches concerning their life work by four men engaged in different occupations. At this point Parsons interrupted and read a poem entitled:

"TWENTY YEARS AFTER."

From all the roads of all the world
 We're back again today,
 To sing the songs we used to sing;
 Beneath the elms to play
 At nigger-baby, marbles
 Or rolling hoops again;
 We're back to dear old Mother Yale
 And dear old Popper Swayne!

Lo, the poor J. Weston !

The man who says we're growing old
 Has got a lying tongue;
 We're still the folks we used to be
 When all the world was young;
 Young Bowns is playing pool still
 And Skee rakes in the mon.
 Just as he did in those old days
 When we were twenty-one.

They say Bob Wade is wearing yet
 Those Trouserloons so bright,
 That dimmed the sun on every day
 And glorified each night;
 That Rathbone—soldier, merchant—
 Still wears the same old hair
 New Haven ladies liked so much—
 Those ladies frail and fair!

They say that Dwight is getting fame
 In corporation lore,
 But you will find beneath his vest
 The same boy as before;
 Stan Moore is running railroads
 And piling up the pence,
 But he can still sing "Old Madrid"
 When sitting on the fence.

In dear old London our young lrv.
 Is representing us
 And fussing with the suffragettes
 And raising quite a muss;
 Ed Gallaudet 's a flier,
 He flies both high and low,
 And drives his little hydroplane
 As once he used to row.

John Robinson 's been holding down
 A fed'ral job they say.
 He 's apt to mix in politics
 And so they say is Hay.
 But senators, or "what-not,"
 We do not care a cuss,
 We only know their souls are true
 And they belong to us.

We cannot tell in these few lines
 The tale of all the Class,
 They 're here and there and everywhere
 And, as the season's pass,
 They may be getting fatter,
 Some grey hairs we may see,
 But every man's interior 's
 Just as it used to be.

We 're home again, we 're home again!
 The years are swept away!
 East Rock looks down on us tonight,
 On high the elm boughs sway;
 The chapel bells ring softly
 The chimes of 'ninety-three;
 From all the roads of all the world
 We 're back, Old Yale, to thee!

So throw your working cares away,
 We 're twenty-one tonight!
 Will Stoughtenborough 's on the fence,
 And every thing 's all right;
 But don't forget, when leaving,
 To take our well-earned rest,
 That that good adage still is true—
 "The old friends are the best."

The serious talks of the evening were as follows:

Preparatory Schools	Warnock
The Northwest	Wheelock
The Public Health	Roby
The Science of Aviation	Gallaudet

Each man spoke about twenty minutes, and it was the general opinion that the Committee had done a great service in providing this opportunity for the Class to hear at first hand of the serious work of some of its members.

On Tuesday morning, June 17th, the proceedings began with the Class Meeting in the headquarters tent. The Class Secretary presided, and reported for the Vicennial Committee that enough money had been collected to pay all the reunion expenses, to complete the Heermance Memorial Fund, to give $5,000 to the University, and to leave a balance in the Class Fund.

Attention was called to the fact that in the Wright Memorial Dormitory there were a suite of rooms named for the Class, a suite named in memory of Ives, and a recitation room named in memory of Lloyd. Announcement was made that these rooms were open for inspection by members of the Class. The Chairman appointed Bottome, Torbert and Birdsall a Committee to nominate the Quinicesimal Committee. The Chairman was instructed to appoint a Committee to prepare suitable resolutions to be sent in the name of the Class to the families of Wigginton, Briggs and Leavitt, whose deaths had occurred since the last formal meeting.

Scoville read a letter from Quintard in reference to his magazine agency, and Newell reported for the Special Committee appointed at the New York dinner in January, 1913, that his Committee had prepared a circular which members of the Class might send to their friends, concerning this subject. The Committee was instructed to send twenty copies of this circular to each member of the Class.

Spalding and Williams were elected a Committee to send greetings to absentees. Williams read a letter from Gatchel, expressing his regret at being compelled to be absent.

GIBBS, FERGUSON, RUNK, ROGERS, YATES, SUTPHEN, CHISHOLM

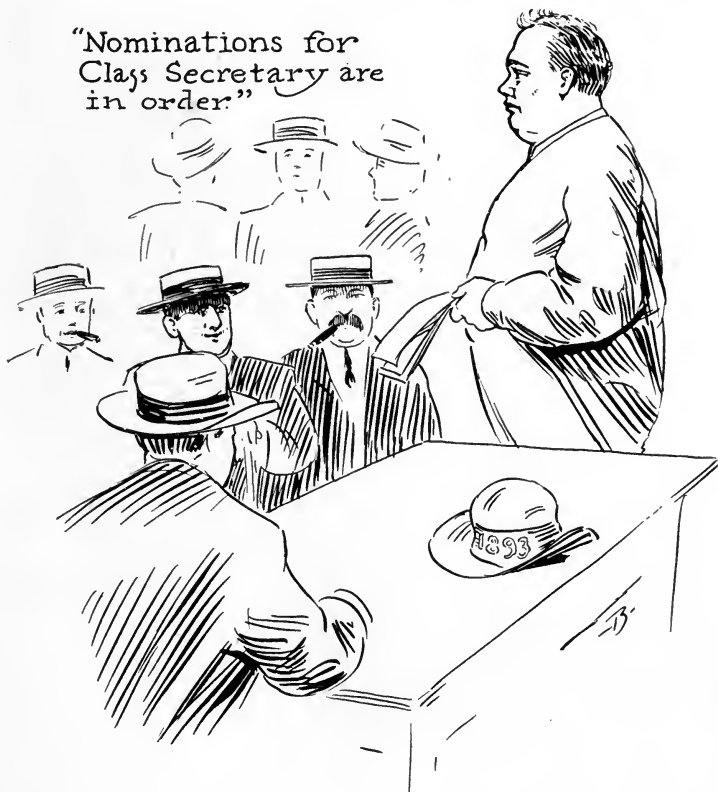

SWAYNE, HACKETT, MORGAN, FAY

The Class Secretary was re-elected to serve until Quinicesimal. The Nominating Committee nominated the following Quinicesimal Committee, who were thereupon elected by acclamation: Fay, Chairman; Begg, Borden, Hackett, Williams.

After votes of thanks to the Vicennial Committee, to Jepson, and to the Class Secretary the meeting adjourned.

"Nominations for Class Secretary are in order."

Luncheon was served in the President's room in the University Dining Hall, and was attended by 100 men of the Class and also by Mrs. Newton with three children, Bradford Boardman, A. K. Merritt, Jr., and H. C. Allen's sisters.

Immediately after luncheon, preceded by Colt's Band, the Class marched through the dining hall and across the campus to Osborn Hall, where the Class picture (frontispiece) was taken. The Class uniform consisted of dark-blue coat, white trousers, blue hatband, and armband with the number 1893 in silver, and light cane.

Included in the picture are the Class Boy, Mathison's three daughters and two sons, Newton's twins, Bradford Boardman and A. K. Merritt, Jr.

Proceeding to Yale Field by special trolley cars the Class joined in the parade around the field, preceded by the Class

Boy and the ten other children mentioned. Mathison bearing the banner and with his children grouped about him was easily one of the most striking features of the parade, the girls especially attracting comment and applause.

The game was a good one from the standpoint of baseball as well as from the Yale point of view, and the afternoon was entirely satisfactory.

The return from the field was made in special trolley cars, and the Class then marched together to call on Professor H. P.

MATHISON AND HIS STAFF

Wright, Professor A. W. Phillips, President Dwight, and President Hadley. The remarks of President Hadley, as printed in the Yale Alumni Weekly, were as follows:

“When we get here together, it does not seem so far back to the days in A1 Osborn when we were comparing notes on our views of economic questions. I remember that the Class of 1893 contributed some very remarkable theorems to the subject of political economy. It was a member of your Class who made the extraordinary, the very extraordinary, contribution to the date on which the modern science began. I had said that Adam Smith wrote 'The Wealth of Nations' in 1776, and it was a '93 man, proud of the accuracy of his knowledge, who introduced into his examination, though I had not asked the question, the statement that it began in 1492. One thing you could always rely on with regard to the members of your Class—whatever knowledge they had, they knew how to make it go just as far as possible. I am delighted to see you at this reunion. It is quite an inspiration to see the way in which the Class of '93 is led up by '93 boys and girls in blue who belong to the Class of '93 and belong to Yale. I have not a doubt that they had no small part in inspiring the nine to hit today when lights were needed. There is one other thing. If there is a graduate of Yale who arouses the enthusiasm of the alumni body and knows how to get what we call the Yale spirit out of an audience, it is Swayne of '93."

The Class then marched to Harmonie Hall for the dinner, at which there were 105 present, including the Class Boy. The menu and toast list follow.

Class song books had been provided and after the singing of "Beer, Beer, Glorious Beer," as a solo by Swayne, with the Class joining in the chorus, and by special request, "Is That You Madge" with gestures, by Bottome, Morgan, who acted as Toastmaster, introduced the first toast as follows:

"My Classmates, since our graduation twenty years ago, the following men have passed from among us onward to the better life: Elliot Stone Curtis, Richard Edward Dunham, William James McKenna, Robert Edwin Rowley, Morris Woodruff, Robert Storer Tracy, Albert Wells Pettibone, Jr., Frank James Brown, Jonathan Boynton Dill, Alfred Henry Jones, Henry Llewellyn Bixby, Frank Howard Button, Frederick Merwin Lloyd, Richard Charles Wells Wadsworth, Theodore Woolsley Heermance, William Henry Murphy, George Greene Martin, Sherwood Bissell Ives, Henry Crosby Stetson, Frederick Asbury Hill, Robert Kerr Dickerman, John Harvey Wigginton, George Justus Briggs, Burton Emerson Leavitt.

"It is fitting that we, the living, should pay honor and respect to those whom unhappy chance has taken from our ranks, and I ask you to join with me, all standing, in a toast to the dead in the words of the song which we so often sing at Yale:

"'Here's a health to the dead already,'

"'And here's to the next man that dies'."

Gibbs, who responded to the first regular toast in the evening, was introduced as follows:

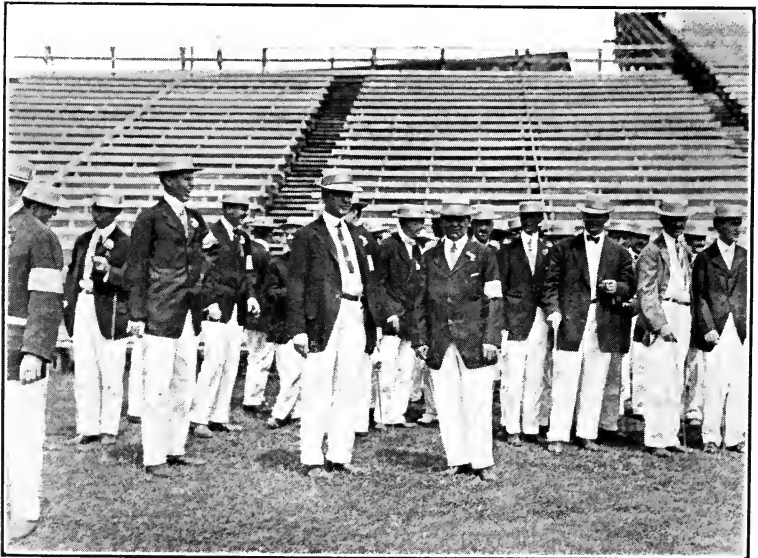

The Toastmaster—"When Rufus Gibbs was in college, he presented for criticism an epic poem in seven thousand stanzas, to that celebrated gentleman whose name was so much more convivial than his face—Professor Beers. On the Professor taking exception to some of the metre, Gibbs haughtily replied that he did not believe in machine poetry, that poets were born, not made. 'Go on, Mr. Gibbs, go on,' replied Beers, 'lay all the blame on your poor father and mother.'

It may be that in the words of the immortal Breeze,

'Here 's to Rufus Gibbs who spends his time—
a writing pomes for oyster labels';—

TAYLOR, RATHBONE, CHISHOLM

ROGERS, RUNK, WILLIAMS

it may be that the canning of the delectable lobster and the curing of the evanescent smelt has lured our rhymster so that he no longer drinks deep at the Pierian Spring—it may be that the raising of a large family and the accumulation of an appropriate bank account, does not commend one to the virgin Calliope; but be it our pride to believe that high among the immortals will one day appear the name of our Rufus and that he comes back twenty years after, and twenty years better.”

Gibbs then read the following poem :

Do you remember, years ago,
 That day in June, that magic hour,
 We breasted first life's undertow,
 Strong in the consciousness of power ;

The power to shape things as we chose,
 The power in action to be free,
 The power that breeds itself in those Whom youth has blessed unsparingly ?

We wanted only to be great ;
 The great things of the mighty earth,
 They beckoned to us soon and late,
 They called us from our hours of mirth.

They called us from our outworn books,
 From play-time and the insidious snare
 That lurked in Hilda's fatal looks,
 Or the slight curl of Lydia's hair.

And we were ready, all and each ;
 We yearned for living and its race ;
 Life was at last within our reach,
 And fame in place of commonplace.

For we were friends of old with fame :
 What else in history did we know,
 Save this or that resplendent name—
 Cæsar, Augustus, Cicero.

What other regions did we hold
 Worth seeking, save where heroes trod ;
 And those resistless ones of old
 Climbed almost up from earth to God.

ON THE BLEACHERS

Ours was the path where glory stood,
 And ours the acclaim in spite of scars;
 For these and such as these we would
 Have raided Heaven and its stars.

For lesser men, the lesser land;
 The ploughshare or the untroubled street;
 For us, the infinitely grand,
 And the whole world at passion heat.

Set us upon some earth-wide stage,
 Uplifted from the ignoble mob;
 Where kingdoms fall, and parties rage,
 And life is at its upmost throb.

There we shall stand while others creep,
 There we shall mix with queens and kings,
 Until at last there comes the sweep
 Of God's immeasurable wings.

Earth must again her portion claim;
 But not until the immortal soul
 Has seen its own immortal name
 High on the world's immortal roll.

And so when other boys and men
 Shall read the story of our age,
 They'll find us mentioned now and then,
 On this, and still another page.

O spirit of the ambitious mind,
 Eternal counsellor of youth,
 When manhood comes, how soon you find
 Just what is false and what is truth.

How soon the vanities that dread
 The thought of life amid repose
 Are overswept, and in their stead
 A sense of true proportion grows.

I grant you that the fire is cold
 That once was kindled in my breast;
 Why yesterday I would have sold
 My hopes of Heaven to win a crest.

ON THE BLEACHERS

Today I'd toss the crest away,
 And where's the king upon his throne,
 For whose magnificence I'd pay
 What God has let me call my own.

And you?—you must have seen, I guess,
 The truth behind the world's disguise:—
 That one finds no such happiness
 In being great as being wise.

Call Alexander back to earth,
 And Cæsar's dust from Cæsar's urn;
 Ask them if all their power was worth
 What it denied them in return.

Bring Helen and poor Antoinette,
 And all their sister Josephines;
 Ask them what value they would set
 On the inheritance of queens.

No matter if they answer naught,
 No matter if they cannot come;
 You sense the truth and catch the thought
 That life is sweetest in the home.

Let not the world and its desires
 Persuade your soul that any strife
 Is worth the winning that requires
 Forgetfulness of child or wife.

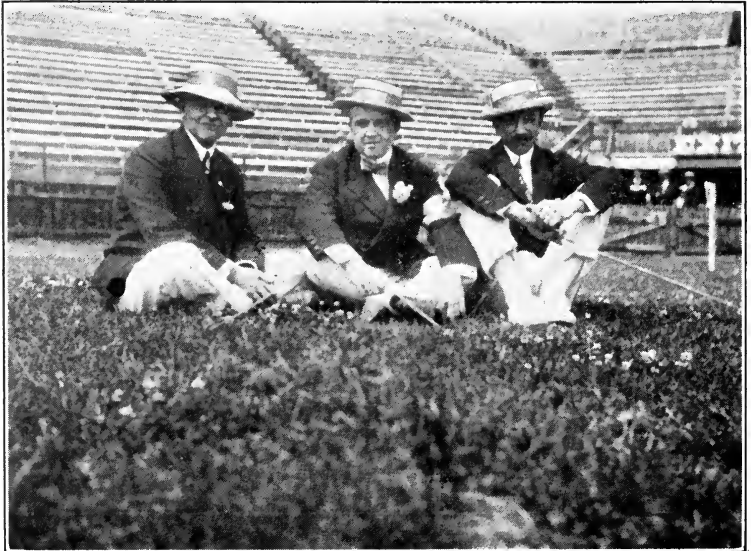

Be steadfast unto these through all,
 And life itself shall be your proof
 That each man finds his noblest call
 At home and under his own roof.

Here is the temple of the race,
 And nations boastful of their power,
 Yet scorning this, come face to face
 With ruin in a single hour.

Here let your passion for renown
 Be molded to another sort,
 Careless alike of crest and crown
 And all the vanities of court.

SUTPHEN, COOKE, SMITH

ROBY, BOWNS, BOTTOME

And you shall count for more than earls,
 Though claimed by no historian's pen,
 Who make true women of your girls
 And of your boys make honest men.

O Mother Yale, teach us thy sons,
 And all thy many sons to come,
 That even to be cast in bronze,
 Voids not the sanctity of home.

Teach us that love is more than fame,
 That simple worth is more than power;
 That many a fine heroic name
 Rings hollow at the judgment hour.

And when all these are understood,
 Teach us this lesson soon or late
 That earth is better for its good,
 And only greater for its great.

The Toastmaster introduced Taylor as a voluntary taking the place of Greer, who was unable to be present. Taylor expressed his own views on the benefit of college training and what Yale has done for him.

The Toastmaster: "Gentlemen, I have a sad announcement to make. I too am a poet. At one of the meetings which the Reunion Committee had in New York when the plans for Vicennial were being discussed and laid out, Harmstad threatened to make me make a speech. Now a speech is a serious thing, it must be carefully prepared, and I told Harmstad that if he tried to badger me into making a speech I would make one which would have for its hero, none other than 'Skee' himself. I then dared him to make me make a speech. I think he has lost his nerve, but I am prepared, and as I have it ready, I must get it off. When I was preparing some few days ago, and wondering what under heaven I should say, suddenly the idea of a magnificent epic in heroic hexameter upon the activities and adventures of our one and only Skee, occurred to me.

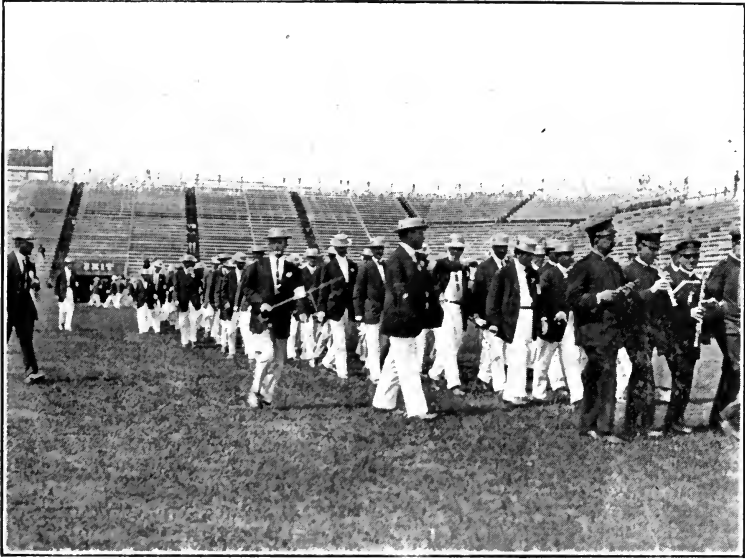

Feverishly seizing my pen, I wrote the following verses which I respectfully offer, and I ask that you join in the refrain of the last line."

The Toastmaster then read a poem, to which the following title had been given: "Skee Harmstad was the Man!" which by special request of the victim, has not been inserted. The Toastmaster:

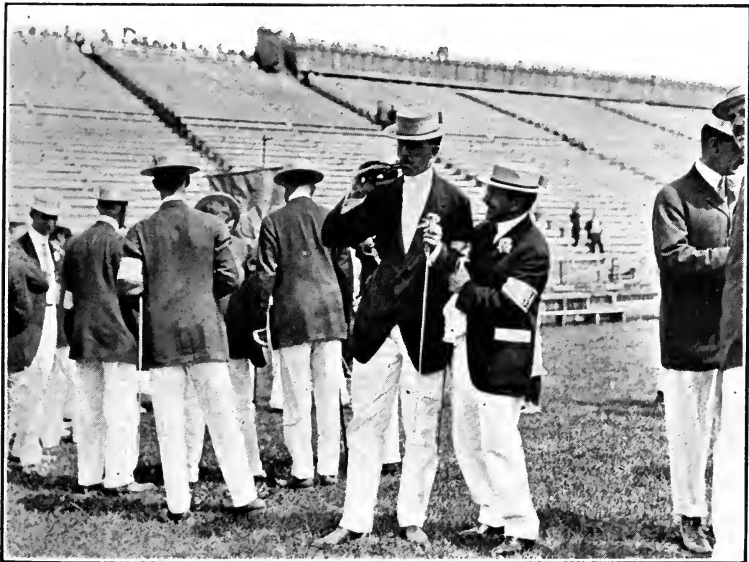

Toastmaster Morgan -
he reads a "pome"

"A scientific friend of mine once asserted that oysters are endowed with the power of reason. On being asked why, he replied, 'Because they know when to shut up.' A Toastmaster, as I take it, must interject himself between speeches, not like the pleasing thirst which comes between drinks, but like the necessary evil which by comparison makes our blessings appear the brighter. The trouble with most Toastmasters is that they talk too much and are like the Englishman who, on being joked

ENTERING YALE FIELD

SPALDING, YATES, SCOVILLE, E. WELLS

because he was continually caught talking to himself, explained it on two grounds: First, 'Because he always liked to talk to an intelligent man; and second, because he liked to hear an intelligent man talk.'

"In introducing the next speaker, I know of no more appropriate thought than that contributed by Munger, '97, to his Class Book, on 'The Things That Really Count at Yale.'

I have clean forgot the elements of Anthropol-o-gee,
 And I couldn't scan to save myself from jail,
 And the Lord knows who discovered the Caribbean Sea,
 And I do not know why turtles have a tail;
 But here we learned the elements of things that count,
 To shut up and still play out our hand,
 To keep on smiling, though we're not given a mount,
 Or put in the division with the band.'

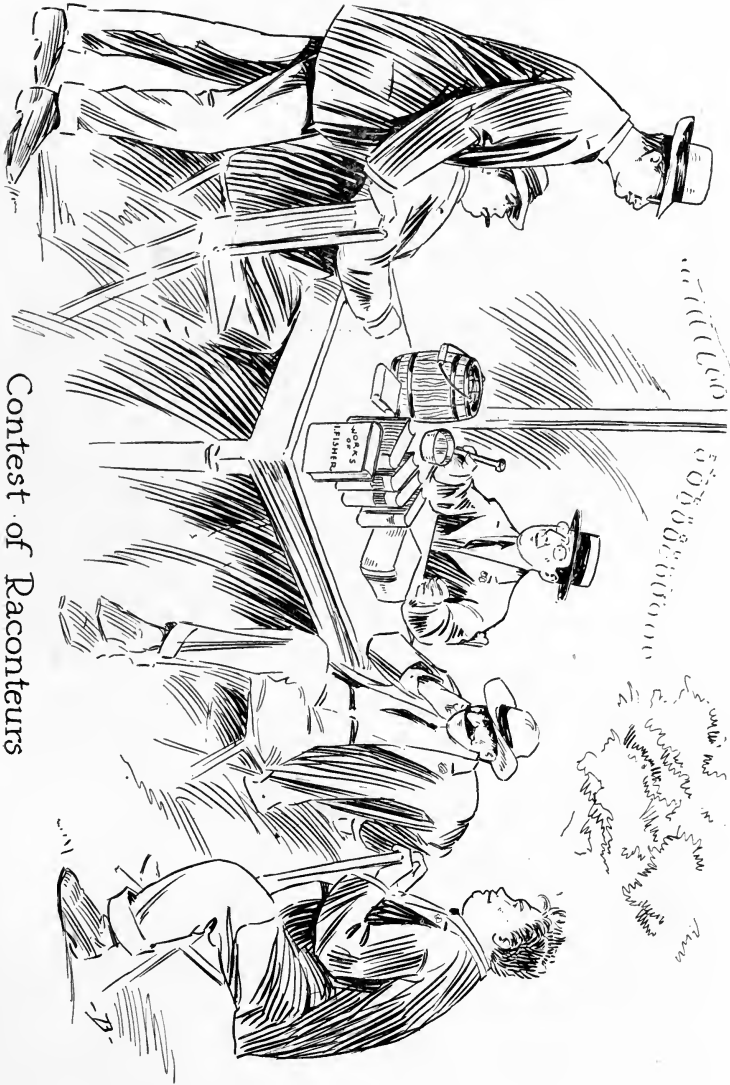

"In college some of us got into the limelight early and many have been tasting nothing but the lime ever since. Charlie Bosworth learned the elements of things that count—he shut his mouth, he kept on smiling, and he played out his hand and he has made good from the very minute he left. It is with great pleasure, then, that I introduce as the last speaker of the evening, Charles W. Bosworth."

After Bosworth's interesting speech the evening was thrown open for request numbers. Birdsall gave his imitations of Hadley and Stinker Moore, and Bates rendered his imitations of good old Tim Dwight, Goat Seymour, Andy Philips and others. Hen Allen, by special request, rendered the "Badminton Club."

The Vicennial Committee announced that they had awarded twin long distance cups to Cravens and Rathbone, and souvenir Yale pins to the children who joined in the parade.

Telegrams to absentees were read and a toast to them was drunk. The Toastmaster read a telegram from Hodge and one from Quintard.

The Class then marched to the campus in a blaze of red fire, with band playing "Onward Christian Soldiers." After a brief stay there the procession moved to headquarters, where the turkey trot was demonstrated by Parsons and Gallaudet, and Harnstad and Williams, and the tango by Bottome and Beadleston.

Contest of Raconteurs

In the interludes Slade was called upon to speak upon railroads and corporations and Bacon to speak in reply.

Henry Allen repeated his repertoire of songs and stories, and then Harnstad crowned the evening by pulling off his second great sporting event, a story-telling contest between Vaile and Goodenough. Vaile appointed Swayne as his judge, and Goodenough appointed Bottome to represent him. Skee appointed himself conductor and referee. The contest was run off in three heats. Each man's judge decided against him and Skee declared the contest a dead heat, and adjourned it to be continued to a conclusion at Quinvicesimal.

The band departed shortly after midnight and the rest of the night was devoted to talk and to informal singing.

On Wednesday about 100 men attended the Alumni Dinner, at which announcement was made of our gift of $5,000 to the Alumni Fund, and of the completion of the Heermance Memorial Fund of $1,000. With this dinner the reunion ended and departures began. A few men remained for the Yale-Harvard regatta on Friday, concerning which enough has already been said.

The Class is indebted for the pen and ink sketches in this book to Bates, and for the Kodak pictures to Fay and Tyler.

This record of the Vicennial Reunion and the biographical statistics attached are as nearly accurate as painstaking effort can make them. The Class Secretary takes this opportunity to acknowledge his indebtedness to the Class and his appreciation of the many marks of affection which the Class has shown him. He hopes that the reunion has brought the Class nearer to each other and has demonstrated the value of the effort to keep alive the Spirit of '93.

The list of those who attended the Vicennial is as follows:

*FRANK JAMES BROWN, died in New Haven, February 14, 1900, after a long and trying illness, brought on by over-work. He was the son of Benjamin S. Brown and was born in Warren, Penna., February 22, 1866. He came to New Haven, in 1888, with a strong physique and a determination to acquire an education. Without money, he accepted the opportunities which offered to pay his expenses while in college. His first work was in the office of one of the city papers, and each morning

*Deceased.

he began work at two o'clock. He continued this strain for more than a year and then went into the Coöp., and later was at the head of the Boys' Club and then a teacher in, and for three years principal of, the New Haven evening schools. During all this time he was working hard in his studies and took a good place in his class. He was editor of the class book at graduation, and was also an editor of the Yale Shingle, the annual of the Yale Law School, from which he graduated, with the degree of LL.B., in 1895. He immediately began the practice of law in New Haven and, throwing the same energy and determination into that work, was very successful. In July, 1897, he was appointed city attorney, which office he held until his death. Mr. Brown was a self-made man and a fine product of Yale. He lost his life in the pursuit of an education, and yet no word of complaint or regret ever escaped his lips during his long illness. He was always cheerful and hopeful, and more ready to help others than to ask for help himself. His strong characteristics were his judgment of men and his power of organization. His life was one continual struggle, but he always said that he would prefer to live a short and useful life to a long and monotonous one. In a book, in which he had written quotations and which he used continuously, was the following, aptly expressing his idea of life:

"Better to sail life's craft where surges beat;
Better the tempest and the wild winds free
Than idle drifting on a stagnant sea."

*THEODORE WOOLSEY HEERMANCE, a grandson of President Woolsey, for whom he was named, and the son of the Rev. Edgar L. Heermance, Yale, '58, was born in New Haven, March 22, 1872. He entered Yale with the class and held high rank in scholarship throughout the course, graduating with Philosophical Oration Appointment. He was a student at the American School at Athens, Greece, 1894-96, and instructor in Greek and Archaeology at Yale, 1896-1902. He received the degree of Ph.D. at Yale in 1898. He spent the years 1900 and 1901 making researches in Berlin and Rome. He returned to Greece in 1902, to serve as Secretary of the American School at Athens for the year 1902-1903, and to succeed in the fall of 1903, as director of that institution, Professor Rufus B. Richardson (Yale, '69), who was about to retire. He died of typhoid fever in Athens, September 29, 1905. His death came as a great shock to his friends in this country, who knew nothing of his illness. One who knew him well said of him, shortly after his death:

"Dr. Heermance's friends and older associates looked forward with pleasure and confidence to his return to Yale in a few years as professor of classical archaeology.

*Deceased.

“Dr. Heermance’s plans for work were broad and high. Like his distinguished grandfather, though modest and far from any self-assertion, he did not lack confidence in his own powers, and shrank from no clear duty, preparing himself with conscientious care for all that he had to do. He was particularly interested in the study of architecture, and made himself a competent surveyor and draughtsman, appreciating his need of this skill and facility in the conduct of archaeological excavations and explorations. In his college days he had seemed fitted for scholarship rather than affairs, but he proved himself an admirable administrator and excellent master of details. Both in the Classical Club at Yale and in the School at Athens he showed himself an excellent librarian. Last spring at the opening meeting of a great congress of archaeologists in the Parthenon at Athens, he spoke so well that an American scholar wrote that our countrymen were proud of their representative. His published work is slight. He had gathered extensive material for a work on Greek architecture, but this is not likely to be in shape for publication. The historical introduction and descriptions which are to accompany the publication of drawings of the Erechtheum recently made by the architect of the School, are believed to be nearly ready for the printer.

“As a scholar Dr. Heermance was sure of high distinction in the future, being broad and independent, as well as unusually thorough and accurate. As a man he deserved many good epithets, but, perhaps in particular, he was cheerful, kindly, generous, frank and true.”

Under his will the Department of Archaeology of the University came into possession of the valuable collection of photographs and pottery made by Dr. Heermance during his work in Greece as Director of the American School at Athens. The collection includes about a thousand photographs of specimens of Greek and Roman sculpture, among which are many pictures of the recent excavations at Olympia and Athens. Among the plasters in the collection is one of the head of a horse from the east pediment of the Parthenon and a large collection of fragments of Greek pottery. Of particular value is a collection of eighty squeezes of Greek inscriptions taken direct from the originals by Dr. Heermance. There are many specimens of marbles.

CHARLES RALPH HICKOX, student at Harvard Law School, 1893-96. Graduated LL.B., and admitted to Suffolk County, Mass., bar in September, 1896, and to New York bar, January, 1897. MARRIED, September 18, 1912, Miss Thérèse Iselin, daughter of Adrian Iselin, Esq., of New York.

*BURTON EMERSON LEAVITT, died of sarcoma in Putnam, Conn., on November 19, 1912. He was born in Scotland, Conn., on October 13, 1871, and was the son of Nason W. Leavitt, at that time a traveling salesman, who subsequently became teacher of music in the public schools of Willimantic, Conn. His preliminary education was obtained in the public schools. He early manifested a talent for music and during the last three or four years before entering college, he was a member of an organization called "The Stars of New York," with whom he appeared as a solo cornetist on many occasions. He was also, prior to graduation, a member of Miller's Orchestra at Watch Hill, Conn., and later of Blaisdell's Orchestra at Portsmouth, N. H. During the year before he entered college, he composed an original opera, "The Frogs of Windham." During the four years of his college course, this opera was produced in every city and large town in Connecticut, with the exception of Bridgeport—three performances in each place. His father preceded him to the place of performance and drilled the local performers in the opera and when the company was ready, Leavitt absented himself from college to conduct the performance. This happened about once in every three weeks during his four years of college. Despite the handicap resulting from this absence, he kept well up in his studies and received both junior and senior appointments. In the early part of his college course, music was first introduced as an elective study and Leavitt was one of the two pupils in the first class, of Professor Stoeckel, and for a time the only pupil. After graduation, he continued his work in music at Yale and in June, 1894, received from the University the degree of Bachelor of Music.

*Deceased.

The wide popularity of "The Frogs of Windham" prompted him to continue in work of this same character. Within the fifteen years following his graduation, he composed six other operas, all of them founded on local legends and all teaching "a lesson of revolt against wrongs of the human race." During this period, he produced also a short grand opera, called "Chocorua's Curse"—a legend of the White Mountains. In all of his work, Indian characters figure. He spent a large part of his time traveling in New England, producing these operas wherever he found the best local talent. He composed a great many songs, the best known of which, "The Factory to the Potter's Field," on the child labor problem, created quite a sensation, the title page and the poem being used as a cartoon in many newspapers. He also published two books, "The Music of the Lakes" and "Songs of Protest," a Socialist publication. In politics he was a Socialist, and in 1906 he was nominated on the Socialists' ticket for Congressman-at-Large from Connecticut. He was for the last four years of his life editor of a magazine known as Our Race Quarterly, founded by Professor C. A. L. Totten. About five years ago, when his mother, and a short time after, an uncle died, he was compelled to devote his attention to family affairs. After that he appeared in public only twice. On these occasions, he directed pageants on a large scale at Norwich and New London, Conn., commemorating the history of these settlements. For these pageants he wrote original music adapted to each scene presented, arranged for a large band. In each of these pageants, over 1000 people took part. As a result of these pageants, he obtained a wide reputation for work of that character and was invited to undertake similar work in many other places. At the time of his death, he was engaged upon the composition of a biblical opera, entitled "Tea-Tephi," which is to be published shortly. He was unmarried. The sole surviving member of his family is his father, with whom he had always lived, and who is now in his eighty-first year.

*FREDERICK MERWIN LLOYD, only son of Samuel Lloyd, of New Haven, Conn., was born in that city March 23, 1871. He prepared for college in the Hillhouse High School. After graduation he held various positions with the Security Insurance Company, New Haven, Conn., from 1893 until January, 1904, when he was elected secretary of the company. He died at New Haven on May 13, 1905, after a long and painful illness. His death removed from New Haven one of the most promising of its younger business men. His character, industry and ability won him the responsible position which he held, and promised for the future a still larger field of usefulness. The insurance newspaper, The Standard, of Boston, in chronicling his death, speaks of "the widespread regret that the career of a man of such charming personality and high character should have thus been brought to an untimely close." An older man, with whom he had been closely associated in business, wrote of him:

"Patient through great suffering, hopeful under discouragement, and thoughtful in every conscious hour for those whom he loved, he has left our sight forever. The genuine sorrow that falls upon all who knew him testifies to the affection and respect in which he was held. Able in his chosen work, with strong convictions for the right, courteous in all things, affable yet self-controlled, it has seemed that he attuned his life to the highest word which has yet been spoken, and bore amid the many activities of business the serene example of a heart of faith. We who knew him intimately, powerless before the inscrutable mystery of his early death, offer this humble tribute to his memory."

MARRIED, June 6, 1901, Miss Bertha Frances Herrick, daughter of Dwight S. Herrick, Esq., of New Haven, Conn.

ARTHUR POWER LORD, studying art in Paris, France, 1893-98. Received M.A. at Yale, June, 1896. Studying in Post-graduate Department at Yale, 1898-99. Received Ph.D. at Yale, June, 1899. Returned to Paris, October, 1899, and remained there until 1903, when he returned to New York to

While in France acted as agent of the University Library, purchasing with University funds necessary books for different departments. He has also made generous gifts to the University Library of books necessary to make the department of French History complete. In 1904, he reorganized the Athens Knitting Company, and in 1905, was elected vice-president of the company. He was from 1907-1908 vice-president of the Morrison Oil Company, treasurer of the Seneca Falls Woolen Company, and in September, 1907, was appointed general manager Eastern Division of the Indian Refining Company, with offices in New York City. He published, in 1896, a sketch of Frederick the Great, and, in 1899, "Regency of Marie de Medicis." Appointed president of the Bridgeport Oil Company, September, 1907. On July 1, 1908, he moved to Cincinnati, O., in connection with his duties with the Indian Refining Company. Early in 1909, he returned to New York, as Eastern and Foreign manager of this company, and in May of that year moved to Paris, to take charge of the company's foreign headquarters. In 1911, he was appointed assistant to the president, and returned to New York, but continued to direct the foreign business of the company. He resigned in 1912, and has since been living in Paris, where he represents the E. I. duPont de Nemours Powder Co., of which he was appointed assistant to the vice-president in January, 1913.

*ROBERT STORER TRACY, son of J. Evarts Tracy, a lawyer, was born in New York City, October 6, 1871. After graduation he attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York City, 1893-96. Graduated M.D. and licensed to practice in New York, June, 1896. At the same time, as the result of a competitive examination, he was appointed to the house staff of the New York Hospital. He entered upon his service there on January 1, 1897. At the close of his service, July 1, 1898, he received an appointment for a six months' term to the house staff of Sloane Maternity Hospital, New York City. Shortly after January 1, 1899, at the close of his service at the Sloane Maternity Hospital, he was taken ill with consumption and went to a sanitarium at Saranac Lake, N. Y., in the hope of regaining his health. He had been making progress toward recovery and was looking forward hopefully to resuming the practice of his profession. He was engaged in certain pathological work at the sanitarium, under Dr. Trudeau, the physician in charge. On the evening of April 12, 1899, after dining at the hotel at Saranac Lake, he started to walk a distance of about a mile to the sanitarium. The ground was covered with snow and the bay in the vicinity of the hotel with ice. Shortly after leaving the hotel the road takes a sharp turn. At that point the ice and snow on the bay were exactly on a level with the road, the ice being about six inches thick, but honeycombed and rotten. Tracy failed to notice the turn of the road, owing to the darkness, and walked straight ahead on to the ice and over the bay. After progressing a short distance the ice gave way under his weight and he fell into the water and was drowned. His absence was not noticed until the following morning, when investigations, immediately set on foot, developed the fact that his death must have occurred in the manner above described. The correctness of this reasoning was confirmed when his body was recovered from Saranac Lake, a short distance from the point of the accident, on May 12, 1899.

In December, 1908, was appointed member of a committee of twenty-eight to investigate town affairs and recommend improvements in governmental conditions of the town of Greenwich. Twenty-six members recommended a radical change in the form of government. Wright and one other opposed this change, and it was defeated in town meeting. Immediately afterward a program of more moderate change was advanced by Wright and his associates, was amended to include some of the features of the report of the majority, was supported by this majority and adopted by town meeting. Wright was thereupon chosen one of a legislative committee of five to secure the enactment of the required legislation and was by legislative resolution appointed one of a board of estimate and taxation of twelve members to serve until November 1, 1911; he was chosen by this board its chairman. He was re-elected as a member of this board at town election, October, 1911, to serve two years more and was again chosen by the board as its chairman. He has been on various committees concerned with the affairs of the town; is now chairman of a committee for the funding of the school debt and of a committee for bonding the town for two hundred and fifty thousand dollars for school improvements; is a member of a committee for the issuance of bonds of six hundred thousand dollars for permanent road construction, and of a committee on town sanitation. He was for a number of years assistant prosecuting attorney for the town of Greenwich, and is now a trustee of the Greenwich Savings Bank; secretary and treasurer of the Belle Haven Land Company, and a director of The Boswell Drug Company.

TERRY PARKER, left the class at the end of Sophomore year to prepare himself immediately for the practice of law. He entered Columbia Law School in the following year, graduated there, receiving the degree of LL.B. in June, 1894. He was admitted to practice in the State of New York in December, 1894. During his course at Columbia he served a clerkship in the office of Messrs. Man & Man. He remained in that office for two years after his graduation from the Law School, and in November, 1896, opened his own office in New York City, where he is still engaged in active practice. In November, 1908, he was a delegate to the Eighth New Jersey District Republican convention and to the State Republican convention, and was elected Justice of the Peace in East Orange, N. J. In June, 1909, he was made Master in Chancery in New Jersey, and in January, 1913, he was appointed Supreme Court Examiner by the Justices of the Supreme Court of New Jersey. He is Adjutant of the First Battalion, First Regiment, N. G. S. N. J.

LUCIEN SHARPE, left the class at the end of Freshman year. He subsequently entered Brown University and graduated A.B. in 1893. He was with the Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Company for several years and was made treasurer of the company in 1903. Owing to ill health he has not been in active business since 1905.

FREDERIC VON BEHM TAINTOR, left the class early in Sophomore year, and has been engaged in newspaper work in New York City since that time. He has been managing editor of The Globe since 1904.

MARRIED, April 19, 1902, Grace A. Pike, Condeso de Almagro, daughter of Charles A. Pike, of Portland, Me.

CHARLES H. THRALL, left the class early in Sophomore year. Shortly after he went to Cuba in the employ of the Thomson-Houston Electric Company, and remained there until the Spanish War. During the war, while acting as a spy for the United States, he was captured and condemned to be shot, but was exchanged for a Spanish colonel. He returned to the United States at that time, and after the war returned to Cuba, where he is now a member of the firm of Charles H. Thrall & Co., general electrical contractors, in Havana. Warnock wrote of him as follows:

"His work in Cuba was to install electric lighting plants. In the course of that work he distinguished himself at Matanzas. There the system had been completed just as a tropical tornado came up, flooding the place and wrecking everything. Under greatest difficulty he kept all the lights he could burning, for it was night, and was complimented for his daring, which is said to have saved many lives. To keep the dynamos going, they passed coal through water waist deep to the furnaces with water nearly to the grate."

MARRIED, October 9, 1895, Miss Ida McPherson, daughter of John McPherson, Esq., of Rockville, Conn.

Child: Corinne, born July 15, 1896.

CORYDON C. TYLER, left the class early in Junior year. Spent the years 1892-94 in the Yale Divinity School. The year of 1894-95 he spent in Auburn Theological Seminary, from which he graduated in 1895. Upon graduation he became pastor of the Trinity Presbyterian Church, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Penna., which charge he still holds. In 1910 he travelled abroad. He lectures on the following subjects: "England, Historic and Picturesque"; "Bavarian Cities," and "The Bernese Oberland."

MARRIED, September 11, 1895, Miss Charlotte Ellen Lum, daughter of Benjamin C. Lum, Esq., of New Haven, Conn.

Children: Mary Ethelyn, born April 5, 1897;

Margaret, born July 17, 1900;

Charlotte, born January 28, 1911.

PERE G. WALLMO, left the class early in Sophomore year. Shortly afterwards entered the War Department at Washington, D. C., and remained in that department until 1894, when he returned to his home at Middletown, Conn., and was with the Middletown Herald until the fall of 1895. From that time until 1911 he was secretary to Congressman N. D. Sperry, of New Haven, Conn., and engaged in newspaper work. In connection with his duties in Washington he studied law in the Columbian Law School, and received the degree of LL.B. from that institution. On May 15, 1911, he opened a law office in New Haven, but in 1912 he moved to Stony Creek, Conn., to engage in raising poultry.

MARRIED, December 26, 1903, Miss Bess Jewell Case, daughter of Edwin C. Case, Esq., of New Haven, Conn.

M. C. WELLS, left the class at the end of Freshman year.

F. C. WILDER, left the class early in Junior year. No information or address is at hand.

NOTE.—The others who did not graduate were members of the class so short a time as hardly to become identified with the class, or else subsequently graduated with other Yale classes. The records of such men are kept by the secretary of the class with which they graduated, and also by the secretary of the University under that class, and it is, therefore, not considered advisable to attempt to keep their records as a part of ours.
